Sandersville, Washington County, Georgia

January 1852 – July 1858

The microfilm used in this compilation came from the University of Georgia Libraries Newspaper Archives. The images are of original newspapers housed in the Office of the Ordinary in Sandersville, Washington County, Georgia, photographed by the University of Georgia Library in July 1958. The microfilm will be donated to the Louisville Branch of the Jefferson County Georgia Public Library in early 2014.

Transcriptions included in this compilation are from newspapers published between January 27, 1852 and July 29, 1858. Dates of issues from which no names were selected, dates of missing issues, and dates the paper was not published are listed on pages 93-94.

The Central Georgian - Devoted to Literature, Temperance, and General Miscellany

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Beverly Walden Black is a relative I have never had the pleasure of meeting in person, but who has provided immeasurable assistance in my efforts to learn about my Walden and Hannah ancestors. She has researched the family in courthouses far and near and shared her findings freely. I would not have begun the search had it not been for her generosity.

COMPILER'S NOTE

I never set out to transcribe names mentioned in The Central Georgian newspaper. I began this journey in a desperate attempt to find the death date of my fourth great grandmother Margaret Hannah of Jefferson County, Georgia, in order to help my daughter complete her D.A.R. membership application. Margaret is the granddaughter of Revolutionary War patriot Thomas Hanna/Hannah of Burke County, Georgia. She died between August 1850 (census) and September 13, 1854, the date her husband, Mitchell Walden, donated ten acres of land for the construction of the Walden Methodist Church in Jefferson County.

I checked every source possible, but found nothing. The Central Georgian was the only surviving newspaper from that period and vicinity that has not been digitized, making it my last hope. However, much to my dismay, the papers from February to December 1854 – the most likely time of her death – do not exist. I compiled the names found on the pages of The Central Georgian in an effort to help others who find themselves in my predicament.

INTRODUCTION

The Central Georgian began publication in 1847 in Sandersville, Georgia, and ceased publication on February 2, 1874. On January 27, 1852, The Central Georgian was published every Tuesday by Samuel B. Crafton. By January 4, 1855, the paper was simultaneously published every Thursday in Sandersville (Washington County) and in Sparta (Hancock County) under the banner of The Central Georgian and Sandersville and Sparta Advertiser.

Publication was suspended on March 29, 1855, due to a fire that destroyed most of Sandersville, including the publishing office and printing press. Publication resumed at the printing office of The Press in Eatonton, Putnam County on May 3, 1855, under the banner of The Central Georgian – Devoted to Literature, Temperance and General Miscellany with local sections for Sandersville, Sparta, and Eatonton. On May 10, 1855, the two publications merged under the name the Georgian and Press. On August 2, 1855, the name reverted to The Central Georgian, with sections for Sandersville and Sparta. On February 29, 1856, the paper changed the publication day to Friday, but returned to Thursday on May 29, 1856. Beginning June 24, 1858, the paper once again only published in Sandersville, and J. M. G. Medlock is listed as the new Editor and Proprietor.

The newspaper's format remained the same during the entire period. A typical issue had literary selections, humorous anecdotes, local, regional, national and international news with emphasis on politics and religion. Local sections contained editorials, meteorology (weather), domestic advice, and farming news. Each edition included two pages of advertisements in the form of display ads, business cards, and legal notices.

Jailers also posted notices about captured runaway slaves including the slave's name, physical description, age, the name of the slave owner, and the location of the plantation. Legal notices advertising estate sales often listed slaves by name and age, sometimes identifying family units. This could be helpful for persons researching their former slave ancestors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

AGES are typically reported as “aged ____ years” or “in the ____ year of her/his age.” A person “aged 45 years” has already had their 45th birthday. A person “in the 45th year of her age” is 44 years old.

DATES of marriages and deaths are often reported using the designation “ultimo” (of the last month) or “instant” (of this month) instead of indicating the actual month. As an example, if the publication date of the newspaper is 22 March 1855 and the death date is 18 inst., the date of death is 18 March 1855. If the death date is 18 ult., the date of death is 18 February 1855. There are several instances where the date is unclear and this is noted. Calendars for the years 1852-1858 are included at the end of this section.

INFORMATION compiled from marriage notices is inclusive and is presented in a standardized format. Information compiled from obituaries, tributes, deaths, accidents, murders, etc., includes the cause of death, other family members, and any clues that could assist in further research. Lengthy obituaries and articles are identified. Tributes of Respect published by fraternal societies may include personal information, but typically contain the text of the resolution acknowledging the death of the society member as recorded in the minutes of the society.

LOCATIONS listed in notices do not always include the city or county. The terms “in this place” and “in this county,” are often used to identify Sandersville and Washington County. In such instances, this is noted and the latter used as the Event Location. If the county was not included with the city in the notice, it has been added when possible, based on Georgia Place Name Maps at <http://georgiainfo.galileo.usg.edu/pnalpha.htm> and Map Guide to the United States Census by Dollarhide. These two resources are useful in locating towns that no longer exist or towns that moved due to county boundary changes. If the same town name exists in multiple counties, the entry is noted.

NAMES in this compilation were found in obituaries, death notices, marriage announcements, tributes, local sections, regional news articles, and sometimes poems. FamilySearch.org databases were utilized to confirm the identity of some individuals and the proper spelling of names. Alternate spellings are included and noted. Names found in probate notices are not included in this compilation, since digital images of Georgia probate records are available at FamilySearch.org. Names found in business card and display advertisements are not included in this compilation, as they do not provide proof of marriage, death or family relationship.

If an individual is listed with initials for both first and middle names, the prefix “Miss,” “Mrs.,” or “Mr.” is included, whenever possible, for clarification. Titles such as “Judge,” “Doctor,” and military ranks as well as the suffix “Esq.” are only attributed to males in this compilation. As an example: a person identified as “her father, A. R. Jones” is listed as “Jones, A. R. (Mr.).”

Females mentioned in the newspaper typically included the prefix “Miss” or “Mrs.,” indicating marital status. If the prefix “Mrs.” is not included in this compilation, assume that the individual is a “Miss.”

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS & MISSPELLINGS abound in the newspaper. Names in this publication are presented as they appear in the newspaper. Alternate spellings are included if found at FamilySearch.org and are noted. Place names, such as Screven county, appear as they do in the newspaper (Scriven), without the designation [sic], as it is not known if this was the common spelling at the time of publication.
